

Saturday 10 February 2024,
Denia Alicante

Dear sir or madam,

This letter is following the recent complaints I made about a teacher and his associates - particularly the computer technical staff - at the conservatory of Denia to which I have received no reply even though the male aggressive behavior against myself continues.

What has happened to me over the last 18 months is extraordinary, and a lot of it is even criminal, but my foremost concern is that this teacher and his computer technician associates have unlimited access to children, mostly girls, and their mobile phones. The ease and hubris with which he and his associates hacked my phone and laptop, took photos and videos of me half naked when I was home alone and disseminated them across the town, tracked my physical movements with my phone and set up intricate coordinated "attacks" around town and elsewhere, situations which were designed solely to terrorize me, can only mean that he has been doing similar with the minor children and women he has unlimited access to as a teacher over the years.

Currently, his students are giving me the overt cold shoulder, which is most welcome in fact as I am going to the conservatory to study music and not engage in what can only be described as being the victim of coordinated misogynistic stalking and bullying, male violence against women, in fact. However, I remain more concerned about their safety and dignity than my own.

So many things have happened, the "attacks" have been pretty constant since October 2022 but crescendoed around June 2023 and since then. There are so many situations I could mention. For example, you might like to ask Domingo's students what they were told about me in October 2023 with regards to a very subtle tweet I posted on one of my accounts which was misinterpreted by him as me asking someone to travel somewhere in a romantic sense with me. Something ironically Domingo also mistakenly believed he did with me in December 2014 when I asked him to visit London with me, as a friend, and he lied to the conservatory about being sick so he could come with me and miss the important departmental meeting that December 2014.

Domingo's students, in October 23, after I posted this misinterpreted tweet, came up to me in choir class and asked me directly about the trip I was going on with a boy and laughed and giggled as if they had been told something salacious about it, which was absolutely ridiculous. But this is the kind of thing that has been going on constantly. Teachers should not be playing these sorts of games with their students. Are there no rules teachers have to follow with respect to their behavior towards students and minors or is Domingo Cano somehow exempt from them?

I believe now that Domingo's original interest in me, apparently romantically, in 2014 was fake, and his true intentions were much darker. I found myself in a dreadful situation with this piano teacher who pushed himself into and involved himself personally in my life, someone who was extremely sexist, insulting, and rude and, in the end when it all went wrong for him, inevitably, I couldn't do anything about it apart from ask for a new teacher.

When men in power overstep boundaries like this, we have to put up with them. We can't get away without drama. They know this.

The story he has been telling everyone to discredit me is the sort of thing you think you might expect from teenagers at high school. They use the fact that they believe they tricked me into thinking one of the teachers liked me romantically to discredit and shame me. The problem is I knew about this trick from the choir concert in December 2022. It was so obvious and extremely unpleasant. Nevertheless, I played along, and by doing so they revealed their intentions and the fact that they have no limits on what measures they might take to hurt a student at the school they don't like.

Domingo has control of WhatsApp groups with his students as members, he instructs them to spy on me and report back to him, and there is a very famous WhatsApp group that either himself or the computer technician is managing which publicizes my tweets to the members, but only tweets they have deemed interesting for whatever reason. This is the definition of stalking and is extremely concerning that public civil servants would have no qualms about doing this to a student. Everyone knows about this group.

The interest has dropped off recently, since my most recent complaint, which is welcome and something of an admission of guilt too, but they are still sharing some of my tweets. I can tell because you can see which tweets people are translating and then they make it known to me at the school that they heard about it. Someone is deciding which ones to share too and the criteria is not clear but my more condemning tweets regarding male violence, voyeurism, and sexual abuse do not get shared. Many of my tweets that have been disseminated amongst the conservatory staff and beyond are misinterpreted, taken personally, and have even caused teachers to be extremely angry with me when I have gone to the school!

You might like to ask any of the teachers how extremely private health matters I only ever told Google are common knowledge?

They have been utterly obsessed with me. It's astonishing behavior, totally unacceptable from civil servants responsible for minors, other people's children.

Nevermind my horrific experiences, I am extremely concerned for the safety and dignity of the young girls they are responsible for. There can be no way I am the only victim of this sort of thing. I also cannot believe I am the only person to ever complain about this sort of behavior which was designed to destroy me, to frighten me into leaving and to never return. The delight they took in engaging in this behavior was palpable and they were not expecting it to backfire so spectacularly.

A teacher who propositions a student romantically and gets turned down and becomes so upset they feel justified terrorizing them extensively over 10 years later should not be anywhere near women or children. It is gender abuse.

The way Domingo Cano spoke about the school girls walking past us in the street as we were having coffee one afternoon after class in October 2014 alerted me immediately to the fact that Domingo Cano has an extremely troubling over-sexualised view of schoolgirls alongside his appallingly low view of women in general.

I tweet a lot of concerns about child safety, gender abuse, and pedophilia. In fact, you might call me a feminist activist of some sort on Twitter and I have been so for nearly 3 years now. I believe these child-safety tweets surprised and upset Domingo and his associates to an even greater extent and put me in even more danger from them. Indeed, they have always been very quick to show me, in an exaggerated sense, how much power they have over young girls by overtly touching them in front of me, for example. It is appalling.

He is often seen in town chaperoning his young girl students and is mistaken for their father by the local townsfolk who don't know him. In my view, he should be nowhere near young girls or have the unfettered access to their phones that he has been enjoying for many years.

I hope you will take some of what I am saying seriously, this is a very serious matter, and has caused me enormous distress and stress.

I suspect if you checked any of these men's hard drives you would find concerning material. And if you check historical complaints you are bound to find a bunch of complaints about him that are similar to this.

I don't want to go to the police but if it continues I will eventually have no choice. However, I think my next port of call will be the media as it is such an astonishing story and extremely interesting to the public, especially parents.

As a Spanish taxpayer and upstanding member of the local, European, and global community, I have every right to study the piano at your most wonderful conservatory in Denia in peace and without being in danger from misogynists who find my existence offensive. It is a great privilege for me to attend the conservatory and study the piano and the extraordinarily high level of teaching is second to none. It is a great shame that a few abusive men have so much control over vulnerable students they are responsible for and don't seem to know how to behave like adults within the law.

Please let me know if you need any further information. If anything else comes to light I may reach out again.

With the very best,

Sincerely,

Dra Katharine Murphy